plaintiff for $1,265.46. In the case of the com'th of Pennsylvania, for the use of Lancaster county, vs. Wm. F. Pickel and Wm. F. Pickel, guardian of Benjamin F. Pickel, garnishee, a verdict was taken in favor of the plaintiff for $852.25. J. and J. Bachman vs. Jacob Myers. Verdict taken in favor of the plaintiffs for John Staley vs. George Wall, William Wesner and George Wesner. This is an action of ejectment to ascertain the ownership of a triangular-shaped piece of ground situated on South Mulberry and West Strawberry streets, having 85 feet on the former and 118 feet on the latter street. The plaintiff traced the ownership of the land by deeds from 1734 to 1866, when they allege that it was purchased by Mrs. Ann Staley, mother of the plaintiff, and wife of Cyrus Staley, from George Miller. Afterwards Mrs. Staley transferred the property to the plaintiff. The deed from Miller to Mrs. Staley cannot be found, it having been lost, without being recorded, a'though diligent search has been made for it.

The defense is that the defendants lent Cyrus Staley, who said that he was owner of this land, considerable money. The land was sold at sheriff sale. They purc'ased it and now hald a deed from the sheriff. On trial. Before Judge Patterson.

John K. Barr and Hattie A. Barr for the use of Hattie A. Barr vs. the Farmers' Mutual insurance company. The plaintiff side of the case is that on May 31 in the year 1867, Mr. Barr insured his house in West Hempfield township, in the defendint company and paid the premiums. When the policy was about to expire the agent informed him of the fact and he said that he desired to insure his other buildings also for three years more and told the agent to make the survey. This was done and in the latter part of April, or early in May 1870, as is alleged, Barr offered to sign an application in blank, as he might not be home on May 31st. This was done and the money was paid and Barr received a receipt dated May 31st. On May 19, 1873, the barn, corn-crib, tobacco shed, &c., of the property, were destroyed by fire when Barr was away from home. When he asked the defendants for his money they claimed that his insurance poljey had expired on May 3d, 1873. The at Fulton opera house this evening, by amount of the insurance on the burned buildings was originally about $4,000. Bair & Shenk, bankers, held a judgment against $3,000 of this money, which they recovered over $1,000, is sought to be recovered by premiere, Mile. De Rosa. plaintiff. The defense is that the insuroccurred, and that the receipt when given of St. JACOB'S OIL. was of that date. On trial.

" WOMANHOOD IN SHAKSPEARE."

Lecture by Wallace Bruce Last Evening. Mr. Wallace Bruce, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., lectured last evening at Fulton hall upon "Womanhood in Shakspeare." The "orator of literature" was introduced by Marriott Brosius, esq. He said that the title of the lecture combined the two best known words in the English language. To place upon the stage all the characters of Shakspeare's dramas would require seven hundred performers, and not one of these creatures resembles in the slightest degree any other. So true are they drawn to nature that not one among them all will ever be out of date. Among these characters we find four heroines to every hero-about the ratio in which they are found in real life. The difficulty is that among so many it is no slight matter to make selections for illustration. Glancing at Shakspeare's creations as a whole we are struck by the strength of his heroines and the remarkable weakness of his heroes. With the exception of Antonio, in the "Merchant of Venice," and Brutus, he has given us no strong or perfect man.

The lecturer described a picture he had seen in which were grouped all the characters of Avon's bard. The heroines appeared like sunshine piercing the sadness and gloom which surrounded his heroes. He divided the female characters of the poet into three classes, the romantic, the domestic and the heroic. Miranda, Rosalind, Ophelia and Julis. were chosen as illustrations of the romantic in womanhood. Most poets and nearly all novelists end their story here-leaving of actual life. The master-genius subordinates the ideal to the real. Queen Catherine, Imogene, Cordelia and Isabella were chosen to represent the domestic and heroic in womanhood. Of all the poet's female creations the lecturer esteemed Portia the most perfect, combining in herself the three qualities of his analysis-romance, the domestic virtue, and heroism. She almost reached the ideal of a perfect woman.

Our conclusion from the study of Shakspeare's female characters is that in his dramas woman is ever represented, wherever we find her, as the soul of society. Her strength lies in her moral influence, and her mission is to reform and elevate man-

It is publicly announced that Mrs. Har riet Lane Johnston has purchased "Stony Batter," the farm on which her uncle, James Buchanan, fifteenth president of the United States, was born, and will erect upon it some monument to his memory. What the character of her memorial will be, whether shaft of stone or building of some other kind, has not yet been stated; but the place is known to nearly all those who have ever spent much time at Mercersburg. A glorious place it is too-that "Gap" on the road to McConnellsburg. Who does not remember the outlines of the mountain just there, with the gray turnpike winding over it, and the cone-shaped cedars and the laurels, and the ferns and clear babbling brooks, and the beauteous lights and shadows that came creeping up, like familiar things, so palpable that one could almost fondle them. We would not be astonished to find it a place of resort in the future, especially now as it is accessible by railroad. What a grand place it would be for our weary ministers so spend a few summer days! How would Dr. Trail Green, or Prof. Porter, like to call the roll of an old Botany class on the little stone bridge that spans the road? Alas ! many, whose gay talk and laughter made the wooded ravines vocal, could not answer. They are gone to their long homes and the thoughts of those who remain would be subdued; but we doubt whether the "old boys" would be more inclined to came down to the analysis of flowers than they were a quarter of a century ago.

Representatives, in regard to the probable number of midshipmen who will enter the navy from the naval academy at Annap navy from the naval academy at Annapolis, shows that there are forty-four midshipmen who have passed their final examin tion for ensign and thirty-five others who will come up for final examination in June next. As three of the latter are sick and some will fail when they come up for examination, the secretary concludes that of the whole seventy-nine not more than sixty-five or seventy will be available to fill vacancies. As there were no graduates in 1877 and 1878, owing to the change from a four years' to a six years' course, and as the number appointed at large is restricted to ten for each of the four classes, this restriction and the extension of the course will greatly reduce hereafter the but had been discharged when thought to the old system, on an average of five years, number of cadets at the academy. Under be sober enough to get home. He reached only thirty-two or forty-seven per cent. Blackstone and probably became again of the total number that had passed through the entire course were graduated. Under the six years' course, and SYRACUSE, N. The report of the secretary of the navy.

n answer to a resolution of the House of

New Hampshire vs. Louisiana, An original bill was filed yesterday in the supreme court of the United States in which the state of New Hampshire is complainant and the state of Louisiana defendant. The object of the bill is to compel the payment by the state of Louisiana of its rightful obligations which it has repudiated. The bill sets forth the history of the indebtedness of Louisiana on which it has defaulted, and recites the acts assuming to provide for the payment of the same. It petitions the supreme court for an injunction against the state officers of Louisiana, requiring them to appear in the court and answer the premises and "abide by the said order, direction and decree as may be made against them in the premises, and as shall seem meet and agreeable to equity and good conscience." will be argued by the attorney general of New Hampshire and by eminent associate counsel. It is in accordance with the idea that was suggested some time since as being the best method for a hope that the state of Louisiana could be compelled to fulfill its obligations. The state of New Hampshire, of course, stands forward as the representative of citizens who are the holders of Louisiana bonds.
